

CPS HUMAN RESOURCE SERVICES MANAGING DIRECTOR GIB JOHNSON RECEIVES AWARD

Bethesda, MD – Last week Gilbert (Gib) Johnson, managing director at CPS Human Resource Services (CPS HR), was given the Outstanding Public Service Award. On May 19th, at the IPMA-HR Montgomery County Maryland Chapter Spring Forum, Johnson was presented the award in recognition of his professional leadership and outstanding contributions in public administration. IPMA-HR and its regional chapters are dedicated to the support and professional development of public sector human resources professionals.

“Public agencies are currently facing extremely difficult times,” said Johnson. “So I am doubly honored to receive this award for a continued commitment to the principles of public service.” Johnson’s career in government has included human resource management, budget and finance, information technology, and project management for CPS HR as well as the State of New Jersey.

Johnson has been recently assisting the National Institutes of Health in providing HR and organizational transformation services to a number of individual institutes, such as the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), and the National Institute on Aging (NIA).

Carol A Rubino, president of the IPMA-HR Montgomery County Chapter nominated Johnson for this award. “He has played an integral role in the field of human resources and the continued development of human resources professionals,” Rubino said.
